New Home Build Timeline: What Do You Need To Know

The decision is made, the timing feels right, you've decided to build a new home!
Need to know what's involved from here?
We've put together a timeline to help give your plans a kick start.

Just like any major life event – there is a journey involved. The more you know about the key milestones in the building process, the better – so that you can manage expectations and importantly, put some plans in place to make the most of the experience.

1 Discovery & Research

Exploring display homes, meeting builders and walking across blocks of land are important steps in the research phase of your new home journey. Building a new home is a significant investment, so it makes sense to be diligent about reviewing your options and consulting experts. Take the time to use the resources available to you – interactive websites, visualization tools and face to face conversations with consultants.

2 Compare Quotations

You will quickly collect a mountain of information along your discovery trail. The key is to devise a system to personally rank each option according to your priority list, so you don't get too lost! Each builder will have a different set of inclusions and a seasonal promotion on offer. Comparing them side by side to check what works for you will give you a clear picture of what options you have available for your budget.
